PROPOSITION 220

JUDICIAL COUNCIL OF CALIFORNIA • ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE COURTS
NOVEMBER 25, 1998

50 of 58 Counties Will Unify Lassen Latest to Join List

Lassen is the latest county to join the growing list of courts that have voted to unify. With Lassen, the number of counties that have voted to unify their trial courts into a single county-wide superior court now totals 50, the Judicial Council reports. To date, 47 of the 50 unifications are in effect. San Diego's effective unification date is December 1; San Francisco's and Lassen's is December 31. Votes in two counties—Kern and Los Angeles—did not pass.

Prop. 220, passed by 64 percent of voters statewide in the June 2 election, amends the state Constitution to permit the superior and municipal court judges within a county to create a "unified," or single, superior court if a majority of both the superior and the municipal court judges so vote. The California Rules of Court allow courts to call for a vote every six months through December 1999 and once every 12 months after that.

More frequent voting requires approval of the Judicial Council.
